Happenstance brought me to Lummi Island. After spending a year at sea, my husband and I sailed into Puget Sound and started to look for a place to stay. Someone suggested Bellingham and along the way we found a lovely anchorage called Inati Bay on an island called Lummi. Within six months we had property on the island.

I grew up having acres of forest and fields to roam in as a child. When as a teen, I watched a large portion of the forest destroyed to make way for development I began to appreciate the foresight of those before me who worked to set land aside for the education and enjoyment of future generations of children.

The mission of the LIHT appeals to my sense of land preservation and I am honored to serve as a member of its Board.
