Born and raised in the Seattle area, I attended Western Washington University, completing a Masters Degree in Education. I retired in 2012 after teaching elementary school for more than 30 years.

My love of the outdoors grew naturally as a result of growing up in a rural area and many family camping trips to the National Parks of the western states. I came to Lummi Island by chance and have stayed because I find the natural beauty to be a spiritual experience and the tightly knit community a family.

My passion for preserving land is rooted in the desire to leave the gift of this beautiful, natural place as a legacy to my children, grandchildren and all the generations to come, now and forever.
